

NEW CAVITY DETECTION

Saves Teeth with "Doppler Radar" Technology

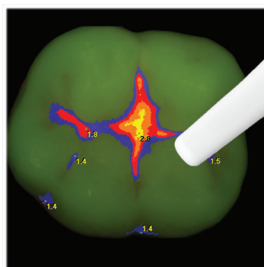

by: Debby Wright

Dr. Jim Wright has been using "laser cavity detection" for the past eight years at Four Seasons Dental Spa. As innovative as laser cavity detection sounds, there is now a much newer and more detailed detection system available. Thanks to an incredible new technology breakthrough, Dr. Wright is now introducing the next generation in "State-of-the-Art" cavity detection to his patients.

The new Early Detect technology uses fluorescence to detect cavities and decay. The monitor shows Doppler Radar-like images, which are easy to understand and allow Dr. Wright to clearly show patients a visual depiction of any cavity. The technology works extremely well with decay which is small and recently formed. It is equally effective with cavities which are older, larger and deeper. These larger, more mature cavities can be close to the nerve, and without treatment, they may lead to root canals, extractions, dental bridges or implants.

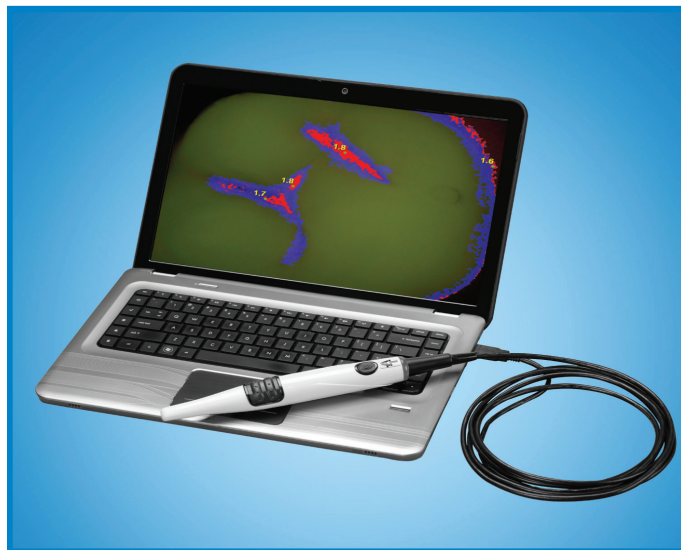

Dr. Wright says, "This new 'radiation free' technology is now helping me to save my patients teeth from larger procedures, which remove more tooth structure and cause patients distress and time in the dental chair. We can help patients avoid invasive and painful dental procedures in the future by finding and treating cavities while they are small. We are now able to circumvent expensive, time consuming, future dental procedures tomorrow, by using this technology today... This is truly Holistic Dentistry at its finest; when we are able to prevent tooth destruction, we are treating teeth as precious, and irreplaceable living body parts."

Dr. Wright explains, "Many times cavities are hidden in the grooves and smooth surfaces of teeth. Previously, some of these cavities may have gone undetected in X-rays and even in doing a visual exam with a traditional dental probe... With this new early detection technology, we can find previously undetectable cavities and save our patients teeth. With Early Detect technology, we can even locate decay, hidden between the margins of existing white composite fillings, and old silver, mercury-amalgam fillings. I am able to use our new technology during the removal of the cavity, to confirm that all of the decay is gone, before placing the new white filling."

With Dr. Wright's new technology, areas of cavity decay which are just forming appear red, while healthy enamel appears green. After capturing the tooth image, the extent of the decay is described in two ways. The image of the tooth and cavity decay shows on a monitor, which his patient can see, as red, orange, blue or yellow. There is also a numerical rating indicated on the monitor between 0 and 5, with 5 being the most advanced decay. Dr. Wright suggests, "Imagine seeing your teeth in the same way as you would see a storm tracking on the TV weather report. You are able to see the eye of the storm... This is what is available with the new Early Detect technology."

Dr. Wright states, "My patients can now choose to have a relatively inexpensive dental filling as soon as the cavity is discovered, as opposed to needing a much more invasive and costly procedure later. The only downside is the extra dental visit time, which is needed, to explore each tooth individually with this new technology."

Another way to use his new technology is to detect Fractured Tooth Syndrome. Dr. Wright explained that, "Hairline fractures in teeth have, for a long time, been almost impossible to diagnose... By using this new technology, we can address these issues and take the appropriate action!"

Dr. Jim Wright has been practicing dentistry since he graduated from Marquette University School of Dentistry in Milwaukee, Wisconsin in 1988. He says he is actually more interested in dentistry today, thanks to attending seminars with the International Academy of Oral Medicine & Toxicology (IAOMT) and the International Academy of Biological Dentistry & Medicine (IABDM). Dr. Wright says, "I feel blessed to have had the opportunity of learning from some of the greatest scientific minds in biological dentistry and medicine... We are living in an era of technology breakthroughs and high tech energy use in the dental field." This is far beyond what we imagined was possible when I graduated in 1988. In many ways we are only scratching the surface of what is possible." Dr. Wright is accredited by both the IAOMT and the IABDM. His dental practice Four Seasons Dental Spa is located at 8855 W. Flamingo Road. Las Vegas, NV 89147. Call 702-281-9900 and speak to his wife and office manager Debby, with any questions or to schedule a new patient exam. Debby Wright is a certified life coach and founder of the Four Seasons Med Spa...adjacent to the Four Seasons Dental Spa. She married her longtime love, Dr. Jim Wright, and relocated to sunny Las Vegas from Chicago. Because of Jim's interest in holistic, biological dentistry, and her own life changing health experience, with the Safe Removal of her old Silver, (Mercury) Amalgam Fillings, she found her new passion; holistic healing modalities and facial aesthetics.
